Iris & Ink's Beautiful Blouse

I'm smitten with Iris & Ink's silk blouse. It's the perfect shade of pink (huge for next season) and the plush fabric means it looks great day or night. It's brilliant for brightening up a winter sweater. I'll be tucking it into high-waisted flared jeans and adding a gold pendant necklace. Kate

Super-Luxe Ankle Boots

If anything can get me to shake up my black ankle-boot habit, it's these navy, velvet beauties. In the fabric – and shade – of the season, they're the perfect alternative to the usual glitzy party heels, but can be easily dressed down with jeans and a chunky jumper too. Lucy

Coach's Cosy Arm Candy

Coach proves shearling isn't just for jackets this winter, as they've created a whole collection of fuzzy accessories. The 'Rhyder' cross-body is top of my list, and while I can't wait to get my hands on the classic monochrome version, it comes in blue, yellow and orange, too.

The Brit Label The A-List Can't Get Enough Of!

Boutique brand Related is racking up quite the celeb fan base, which is why you need it on your fashion radar, pronto

Nothing makes us more excited than the discovery of a cool new label. So, when we find one that's not just affordable, but has been worn by the likes of Kendall Jenner, Emma Roberts, Jamie Chung and Jade from Little Mix, the levels go off the scale.

Right now, that label is Related – the brainchild of a London-based mother/daughter design duo. And it's about to go stellar, thanks in no small part to a whole host of A-list ladies snapping up designs from the winter collection. Emma rocked the chic 'Marsie' dress in NYC, Jade donned the 'Casey' dungas on the red carpet, and Kendall has just cemented the 'Larkin' skirt as a cult buy after she snapped it up. Oh, and Alessandra Ambrosio caused the 'Callie' jumpsuit to sell out instantly after she was spotted in it – fear not, they're re-stocking as we speak.

Basically, Related is hot fashion property right now. Expect feminine but directional designs – everything from dresses and coats to jumpsuits and separates – in luxe fabrics that justify the 'slightly higher than high street' price tags. Ready to join Related's super-stylish club? Us too! Head to Relatedapparel.com.

HAIR STROBING

HAS ARRIVED

Over highlights and in need of a colour upgrade?
Meet the latest trend for your tresses that's gone viral...

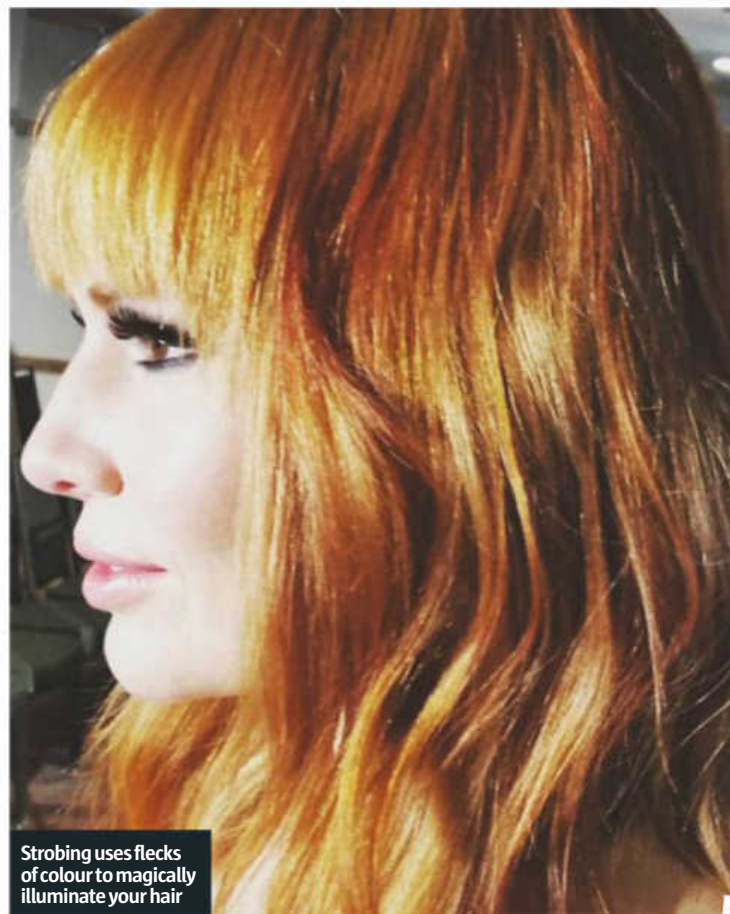

We've all heard about strobing your skin to highlight and enhance every angle, but did you know the clever technique is now a hair trend? And it's a dreamy one at that. Yes, hair strobing is officially here – and just in time for party season.

The technique itself is pretty simple – pioneered by US-based colour genius, Justin Isaac, it involves hand-painting flecks of colour onto the hair in a range of complementary shades. These flecks are then blended to create a soft, multi-tonal finish with high and low colour points across every strand.

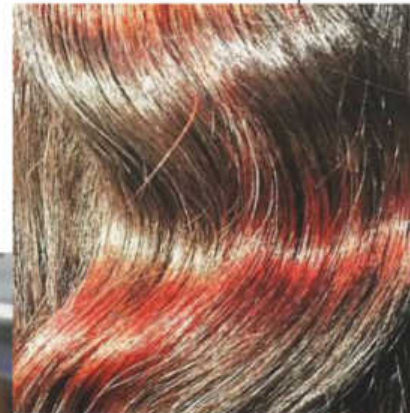

'Hair strobing isn't about vertical or horizontal colour; it's about tricking the eye and being visually stimulated,' explains Justin. Unlike balayage and ombre, these subtle colour changes are made with shimmering shades to help naturally illuminate your tresses, giving them a mega-glossy finish. Lighter hues can be placed around the eyes and cheekbones to enhance features even more, while darker shades can be expertly placed to frame your face.

The application of colour is kept to the very surface of the hair – rather than throughout the whole head – which replicates the effects of strobe lights bouncing off it. The result? Your shiniest hair ever and a seriously flattering colour that's totally unique to you.

With hair strobing going massively viral on Instagram, it's no surprise we're all crushing on this new light-reflecting colour trend. Ladies, get hair strobing!

Strobing uses flecks of colour to magically illuminate your hair

Fast Facts Of Strobing

● It looks amazing on curly hair, as the low and high points in the colour help enhance each and every wave.

● If you have naturally straight hair, use T3 Whirl Trio, £199, to create stunning curls. With three differently sized barrels, you can achieve tight ringlets, beachy waves and loose, subtle curls.

● Boost your colour even more by using a high-shine finishing spray. Our favourite is Redken Shine Flash 02, £14.40, as it gives serious gloss with zero greasiness.

A close-up portrait of Rihanna. She is looking directly at the camera with a serious expression. Her right hand is raised to her forehead, with fingers spread. She has several tattoos on her right arm, including a large, intricate design on her forearm and a smaller one on her wrist. She is wearing multiple rings on her fingers, including a large, ornate diamond ring on her index finger. She is also wearing a gold chain necklace and a gold earring. The background is dark and out of focus.

PRIVATE HELL

'I Felt Vulnerable
& Confused'

THE WORLD HAS GONE INTO A SPIN OVER THE RETURN OF RI-RI – BUT LOOK CAN REVEAL HER LONELY, PERSONAL STRUGGLE...

If there's one thing Rihanna knows, it's how to keep a secret. Over the past few weeks, the Barbadian singer has been teasing out some very cryptic clips for her long-awaited new album ANTI, set to drop this month. But it's not just her music she's been holding back. While the outwardly confident star, 27, appears poised to dominate the music scene again in 2016, she's in fact been quietly battling some serious self-confidence issues which have left her feeling more isolated than ever.

'People have this image of me, of how crazy and wild I am,' Rihanna said recently. 'The reality is that the fame, the rumours – this picture means this, another picture means that – it really freaks me out.'

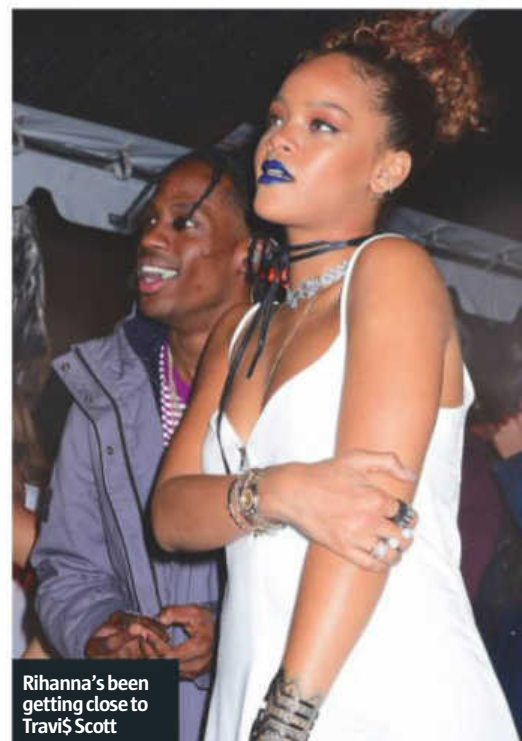

It doesn't sound like the Rihanna we thought we knew, right? The singer, who has been infamous for her 'bad gal Ri-Ri' persona, is said to be struggling to come to terms with her identity after a period of growing up over the past year.

'It's been a very odd time for her,' a source tells Look. 'And a lot of that is because of this confidence crisis she's going through. The pressure to succeed has really got to her and it's having an effect on everything – from her love life to her music.'

While Rihanna seems to be constantly surrounded by pals, she admits that being in the spotlight has actually left her unhappy in love and feeling "lonely".

'She's really lost her confidence when it comes to dating,' another source reveals. 'She was always the one in control and had all the boys on their knees begging for her time, but that's all changed.'

Rihanna's emotional setback followed the media storm surrounding

Rihanna's been getting close to Travi$ Scott

“I’ve had to be wary about why people want to sleep with me”

the end of her relationship with Chris Brown, 26, in 2009. And it is something she's only been able to talk about fully recently: 'It was a time in my life where I felt vulnerable and naked. I felt confused,' she admitted. 'I felt like the world was watching.'

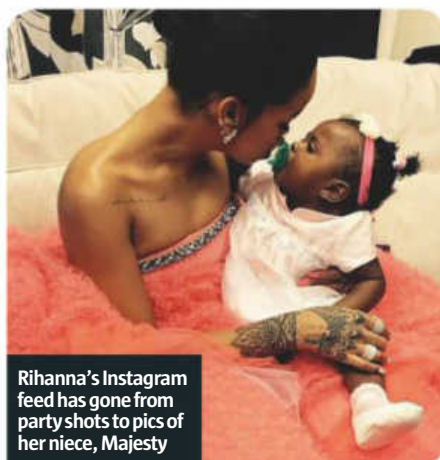

It's a feeling she's struggled with ever since. '[Fame] made me back away from even wanting to attempt to date,' she revealed last month. 'I've had to be so conscious about people – what they say and why people want to be with me, why people want to sleep with me. It makes me guarded and protective.'

Now, the singer prefers to keep the men in her life firmly off radar, not walking a red carpet with a partner for over six years.

Currently, Ri-Ri's been seen getting close to rapper Travi$ Scott, 23, who she met while recording her album during the summer, but her personal battle has very much influenced the relationship, with a source telling Look they are 'keeping things on the down-low. She wants to see where it goes, with no expectation'.

'I know Rihanna's still scarred from her past experiences – she always will be,' an insider reveals. 'It's crazy when she's such a success and considered one of the most in-demand women in the world.'

Her previous hurt means that while Rihanna is happy to date, she has shied away from long-term

Coordinated Cool

Earning Her Stripes

Never one to underestimate the power of a standout piece, Rihanna's bright coat instantly elevates her classic jean and shirt combo commitment. This year alone she was spotted hanging out with Formula 1 champion Lewis Hamilton, 30, in LA and in Barbados, where they were pictured together at carnival. Then in July, she was pictured on several dates with French footballer Karim Benzema, 27, in New York. But despite both men reportedly pursuing her, the singer never wanted anything serious.

'I get fearful of relationships,' she has admitted. 'I feel guilty about wanting someone to be completely faithful and loyal when I can't even give them 10 per cent of the attention they need.'

But it's not just relationships. That fear has leaked into other areas of her life too, as the star's apparently finding it hard to juggle her party-girl persona with that of a woman who just wants to find love.

'Rihanna still likes to party, but she's definitely losing interest in it,' a source says. 'She posts a lot less online these days and you hardly see her on yachts in the Med anymore.'

“She's changed this album's release date countless times”

While in the past we've been used to Rihanna sharing flesh-baring snaps with her 30m Instagram followers, recently she's been trying more covered-up looks – even a recent tour poster shows her wearing a fierce tuxedo. And rather than selfies with her Hollywood pals, from Jourdan Dunn to Katy Perry, she's been highlighting her homely side, often posting snaps of her cute one-year-old niece, Majesty.

'I think she's finding it hard as she still wants to be a success, but she doesn't want to compete with the likes of Miley Cyrus anymore,' adds a source. 'But she's worried about how this could affect her fans.'

No doubt the pressure is on for Rihanna after her last album Unapologetic in 2012 received mixed reviews from the music world, with many commenting it 'lacked edge'. Her last single Bb Better Have My Money, which she released earlier this year, failed to reach the top 10 in the US charts.

'She's changed the release date of this album countless times,' says our source. 'It was supposed to be out nearly a year ago, but she's really struggled finding a direction.'

As we revealed in August, the singer had been in New York and LA focusing on recording brand new tracks. '[She] is not happy with the new album,' her father Ronald Fenty revealed in an interview with The Sun at the time. 'She doesn't know which of the 26 songs to use. She's still looking for fresh material.'

'Rihanna's worried about its reception because she really wants this one to do well,' adds a pal. 'She needs this boost as she really wants 2016 to be her big comeback year.'

It's not like 2015 has been a quiet one – this year she's worked as Creative Director of Puma, launched her sixth perfume Ri-Ri and directed the music video for Bh Better Have My Money. Insiders also say she's currently being 'chased by Hollywood' after she impressed in auditions for upcoming sci-fi film Valerian And The City Of A Thousand Planets (due out in 2017)

“She's feeling the pressure – she really wants things to work out” in which she's landed a part with pal Cara Delevingne. To top it all off, last week the star announced a huge global seven-month tour, starting in February.

'She's feeling the pressure,' another source says. 'But I think she's determined to try and put her fears aside because she really wants things to work out, professionally and romantically.'

And it seems that she's starting to make some headway with that. Travi$ is going to be her support act for the North American leg of the show.

'She's determined to do her best to battle these inner demons,' a source tells us. 'And the fact that Travi$ is joining her on the road is a really good sign. It shows that she's committed to the idea of them still being together, which is a first for such a long time.'

'I'm like most people – we fear the unknown and the things that have yet to come to pass,' Rihanna says. 'Which are the very things that don't deserve to be feared.' We couldn't have put it better ourselves...

£640k Pre-Birthday Blowout!

A private mansion, top caterers and fireworks – where's our invite?

NO one throws a party quite like Taylor Swift, whether she's having a night with her BFFs or inviting her crew to her Rhode Island mansion for 4 July. So it's no surprise the Bad Blood singer decided to take over an entire Aussie island for a huge pre-birthday blowout. Talk about celebrating in serious style!

To mark her 26th birthday (and celebrate finishing her 1989 tour in Australia the night before), she took her entire 125-strong crew with her...

'Taylor also chartered private jets to fly friends from Los Angeles and New York too,' an insider tells Look. 'She invited Ed Sheeran and her family, who flew out for the end of her tour.' Um, best friend ever.

And apparently no expense was spared. 'Flying everyone across the globe set her back £330k, on top of renting a private mansion on Hamilton Island for £17k,' another insider says. 'All the food and drink cost around £165k – she even enlisted a squad of private caterers from LA and New York – and she bought a £13k birthday cake.'

'Taylor wanted a party to remember,' adds our source. Last year, she celebrated at her pad in New York with 20 boxes of pizza reportedly delivered. But in true Taylor style, it wasn't just a cosy night in, with guests including Queen Bey and Justin Timberlake.

While she reportedly splashed out £50k on an elaborate fireworks display this time around, Taylor is also organising a slumber party costing £65k for more of her A-list pals after her actual party – and they've all been told to keep a certain date free.

Taylor's glam squad had better get ready for the party to end all parties

“Food and drink cost £165k”

'She's hired private masseuses, manicurists and facialists to pamper everyone,' a source says. The Insta-envy has already started.

So what do you give the girl that has literally everything?

'Amazingly, Taylor is holding fast to a no-gifts rule,' reveals an insider. 'She just wants her friends around to celebrate her birthday.'

Ellie & Dougie's Shock 'Split'

Ellie Goulding
& Dougie Poynter

Well we never saw this coming. Pop's power couple have apparently cooled things off after two years. Major sad face. The surprise comes a month after the On My Mind singer revealed she was ready for marriage. 'God, yes! I'm nearly 30,' she said, while many friends had speculated the couple would be engaged by Christmas.

'Ellie seemed ready for marriage in the near future,' a source tells Look. 'But Dougie didn't feel ready to make that commitment just yet. I think he needs more time.'

While the poster couple, both 28, are usually giving us Insta-envy with snaps of their date nights and his 'n' her workout sessions, they haven't been pictured together since the beginning of November, and Ellie was a no-show at her beau's 28th birthday last week. It can't have helped when she was seen with former flame, 1D star Niall Horan at the KISS FM Jingle Ball in Texas last week.

“They'd been arguing over their schedules”

The pair haven't been seen together since 4 November, when they were spotted leaving trendy Sexy Fish restaurant in London looking strained

Ellie's schedule has reportedly been partly to blame – she's spent the past three months touring to promote her new album, Delirium. 'Ellie and Dougie had been arguing more over their schedules keeping them apart,' an insider told us. 'It was putting added pressure on their relationship.' But could this be the end for love's young dream? Perhaps not. According to our sources the pair hope it will be a temporary break. Fingers crossed!

Mary-Kate Olsen
& Olivier Sarkozy

And the award for the most, er, unique wedding theme goes to Mary-Kate, 29, and her 46-year-old new beau, Olivier, who tied the knot last week after three years. More than 50 guests at their intimate New York nuptials were treated to bizarre wedding treats; cigarettes, which were arranged in bowls around their townhouse venue and according to insiders 'everyone smoked the entire night'. OK then! Congrats guys.

Aw! The pair do the happy couple smooch very well

Yep, we detect the ever-so slightly smug demeanour, Olivier

MYLENE

‘Body Confidence? I Get That From Swimming With My Girls!’

With her (perfectly coordinated) daughters Ava and Hero

We caught up with stylist Myleene Klass to find out her fitness go-to, the frocks she's loving this party season and the importance of killer lingerie

ME

Interview Of The Week

Myleene Klass is unstoppable. Not only is she one of the most in-demand presenters on the box, she's a bona-fide fashion darling, thanks to her past eight iconic collections for Littlewoods. And her latest offering for the brand is sure to be a sellout – especially the sexy lingerie that we got a first look at. Think leopard print and lust-worthy lace onesies. Party outfit under-prep sorted!

The 37-year-old is our poster girl for body confidence – whether she's in a flesh-baring dress on the red carpet or giving us serious bikini-body envy on Instagram. And who can forget that shower scene on I'm A Celeb in 2006? Myleene's message? Women should celebrate their figures. She stands up for other women, too. Last month she knocked down haters on Twitter for body shaming celebrities like Cheryl Fernandez-Versini and Caroline Flack. Just one more reason to fall for Myleene.

While her love life has created headlines in the past (she split suddenly from husband of six months and boyfriend of 11 years Graham Quinn three years ago) the mum-of-two has always been a fighter – with a little help from her BFFs (her young daughters Ava, eight, and Hero, four) and boxing sessions. Look caught up with the superwoman...

“ I love the two-piece lace set – comfy and sexy all at once ”

Hi Myleene! You've been in show business for a long time now – what's been the best aspect of your career?

The fact I'm sat here talking to you 15 years down the line! There will always be people who are famous for certain reasons, and people who use their fame to endorse brands and products, but I think I've had to diversify and at the same time I've grown as a person.

Did you experience any backlash when you were starting out?

People laughed at me when I told them I wanted to build my own empire. But here I am selling my range of luggage, hair electricals, make-up, dresses, lingerie and swimwear.

You seem like you have a thick skin...

My confidence is growing all the time, being a working mum in such a competitive and fast-changing climate. I'd like to think I've been able to speak up for women. It's taken a lot of hard work to get to where I am and of course you have good and bad days at the office, but that's what I signed up for.

Will you get a chance to jet off anywhere this Christmas?

Yes, definitely! Don't get me wrong, I will be sitting watching the Queen's Speech with my dad and putting batteries in the girls' new toys on Christmas Day, but if you know me you'll know I love to travel, which I get from my dad who was in the Navy. We counted that by the time Ava was two-and-a-half, she'd already been to 43 countries. I can pack my suitcase in about 10 minutes before I go anywhere.

You always look amazing in your holiday snaps. What's your go-to fitness routine before you go away?

I promise you I don't go to the gym! I don't think I've been pictured leaving one since my Hear' Say days. But I do love boxing, which you can easily do in the garden – the girls get a pad each and get involved too! And I'll usually up my swimming sessions – my girls love it, so it's a great family activity we can do at weekends. Also small changes like taking the stairs instead of the escalator make a difference. I never use those moving walkways at airports either!

What are your luggage essentials to take with you?

Pyjamas and underwear that are small and easy to pack, one dress for the day, one dress for the night, and of course shoes. Sorted!

Your skin always looks flawless. Do you change up your beauty routine going into the colder months?

I exfoliate like a demon! And slathering on lots of lotion when I get out of the shower always helps.

Having had a sneak peek at the AW15 collection, we love it. What's your favourite piece?

The lace cami and trousers – you really wouldn't mind your other half seeing you in them. I said to my girlfriends: 'I really need sexy loungewear' and that's exactly what it is. Just wear your regular underwear underneath, and you'll feel comfy and sexy all at once. What more could you want?

Do you think underwear is just as important as a killer outfit?

Absolutely. Good underwear really is the foundation to your garment. I read something crazy – that 60 per cent of women are wearing the wrong bra size, so think how amazing they'd look if they made the change. No one wants the four-boob look!

Interview Of The Week

What will you be wearing to all the parties this season?

If it ain't sequin, it ain't happening! This range is also about what I want to wear this season and, for me, as soon as it hits November, it's all about sparkle, sparkle, sparkle. But what's really important to me is wearing something that you can have a laugh with the girls in. There's nothing worse than seeing someone not joining in the fun or dancing because they can't physically move!

What do you feel your sexiest in? Something that makes me feel like the boss lady. I've got this amazing leopard-print dress from the collection, it's definitely something that takes a lot of confidence to wear. I dress for myself, and I don't really tend to follow a trend just because everyone else is into it. I want to wear what I want. It's liberating.

But the collections aren't just about statement pieces, are they?

Not at all. Sometimes it's the simplest things that work. My black jumper sold out instantly when it hit the site – my friends still won't let me live it down that they didn't get their hands on one. I'll have to reserve them a couple of leopard-print dresses to make up for it.

Do you think your own style is something that women have really responded to in your collection?

I've always loved the world of fashion – from creating my collections to watching my mum sit at her sewing machine first-hand. I've grown to have a genuine knowledge about it and I have a real passion for how it's put across to women.

You're still really humble about success – do you have to pinch yourself?

Absolutely. Now, every 60 seconds, we sell a piece of the MK collection. It used to be every 15 minutes, but now it's every minute! It's unbelievable.

“I've always loved fashion. I have a passion for how it's put across to women”

Myleene and mate Kelly Brook know how to rock party season

What's the most rewarding part of creating your Myleene Klass collection?

The fact that it's real women wearing my underwear and clothing. They want something to feel great in. There comes a point when the market is oversaturated with brands that are selling lace dresses or sequin items, and I have to think: 'What makes my clothing different?' I have to look really hard at myself and think about that. When you see strong women who stand for something, and you know it's not just a case of endorsement, I think that really shines through.

THREESOMES

The New Normal?

A dating app dedicated to threeways has seen its number of downloads spike – so is it time to consider a ménage à trois? Look investigates...

It's Saturday night and Joanna*, 23, is swiping through her phone. 'Nope,' 'Yes,' 'Definitely,' she shouts to Mark*, 24, who is sitting next to her, swigging a beer. It may look like a standard night in, 'playing' Tinder with mates. But Mark isn't Joanna's friend, he's her boyfriend – and they're on 3nder, an app dedicated to finding like-minded people to have threesomes with.

With more than 700,000 3nder users worldwide, it won't be long until Joanna and Mark find the perfect companion for their 'sexy night in'.

The so-called 'Tinder for threesomes' was launched last year, but its popularity has ramped up in recent months with 17,000 new downloads each week. Whether you're single and looking for a night with a couple, or in a relationship and like the idea of someone joining you, you can create your profile, list your interests and get swiping. 'The majority of people on the app are under 35 – and sexually adventurous,' says Dimo Trifono, 25,

“I wasn't sure how I'd react, but I really enjoyed it” creator of 3nder. 'But we also ask that people list their interests – both sexual and general. We want people to go on and see others like them.'

From a quick Look test of the app, it is indeed full of young, attractive people, some new to threesomes, others more experienced who are just looking for a fun evening. From their smiling, gorgeous profile pics and fun introductions, the app has taken the threesome fantasy and turned it into a very appealing reality. But can having sex with more than one person ever be without complications?

'Some of my friends can't believe I can watch the man I love have sex with another woman and not get jealous. But it works for us. However, we have come across couples for whom it's been a really bad idea,' says Joanna, a personal assistant from Hertfordshire. 'We've been together four years and had our first threesome after six months as we both fancied it. I was looking forward to having sex with a woman – it was something I had always thought about. I wasn't sure how I'd react to seeing Mark with someone else so we set some ground rules, like stopping the moment either of us feels uncomfortable. But I really enjoyed it. Now we hardly have any rules as we trust each other so much – we have a couple of female friends who we see regularly and it's added a new dynamic to our sex life that's made us closer.'

And it's not just couples who are becoming more open to the idea. Recently the rise of apps like 3nder mean more single women are meeting up with a couple or friends for passionate nights where they can be the guest star.

'I got chatting to a woman at a party and somehow we got onto sex,' recalls Victoria*, 24, a barmaid from Leeds. 'I was so naïve I didn't know she was coming on to me – even though she pointed her boyfriend out and asked me what I thought! It became clear when she kissed me. I wanted to experiment so I went back to theirs and we giggled all the way through. It was amazing, but different from what I expected – the only shocking moment was seeing the pair of them have sex. It's nothing like porn – and there was something so graphic about it. But I soon relaxed and ended up having an incredible night.'

Nights like this are more common than ever. A sex survey ten years ago revealed that 14 per cent of those asked had had a threesome, while in 2014, a study of more than 5,000 people saw that number rise to 20 per cent. And

“It has added a whole new dynamic to our sex life that has actually made us closer”

a recent YouGov study showed that 49 per cent of British 18 to 24-year-olds do not identify as entirely straight.

'The popularity of the app shows that people are more comfortable than ever with their sexuality,' says Dimo. 'Everyone is beginning to realise it's OK to be attracted to different people in different ways – even if you're in a relationship.'

However, for every threesome gone right, there are plenty that have gone wrong. And when they go wrong they can go very wrong, as Louisa*, 25, an actress from Sheffield, found out. 'One drunken night my boyfriend's best mate came over and we drank a lot and all ended up in bed together,' she says. 'We all woke up so embarrassed and after that my connection with my boyfriend was gone. It felt like we'd invited someone into something special, and it created a distance between us. Not only did we break up, my boyfriend and his best friend never spoke again.'

'I wish we'd talked about it before just acting on it,' she adds. 'I honestly think I'd still be with my ex if it wasn't for that night. It's my biggest regret.'

'It has to be something you're both keen to explore,' says Joanna. 'You have to be open for a lot of communication. It can lead to something amazing, but you have to be sure it's what all three people want.'

Should You Have A Threesome?

Sex therapist Sarah Berry offers her tips...

If You're In A Couple

● Think about why you want a threesome – is it because there is something wrong with your relationship or you're not feeling satisfied? If you're not positively coming into it as a team, there can be repercussions.

● Explore the differences between your fantasy and the reality. Discuss everything, from where it will happen and who you will pick to join you, to who does what and whether some things are off-limits.

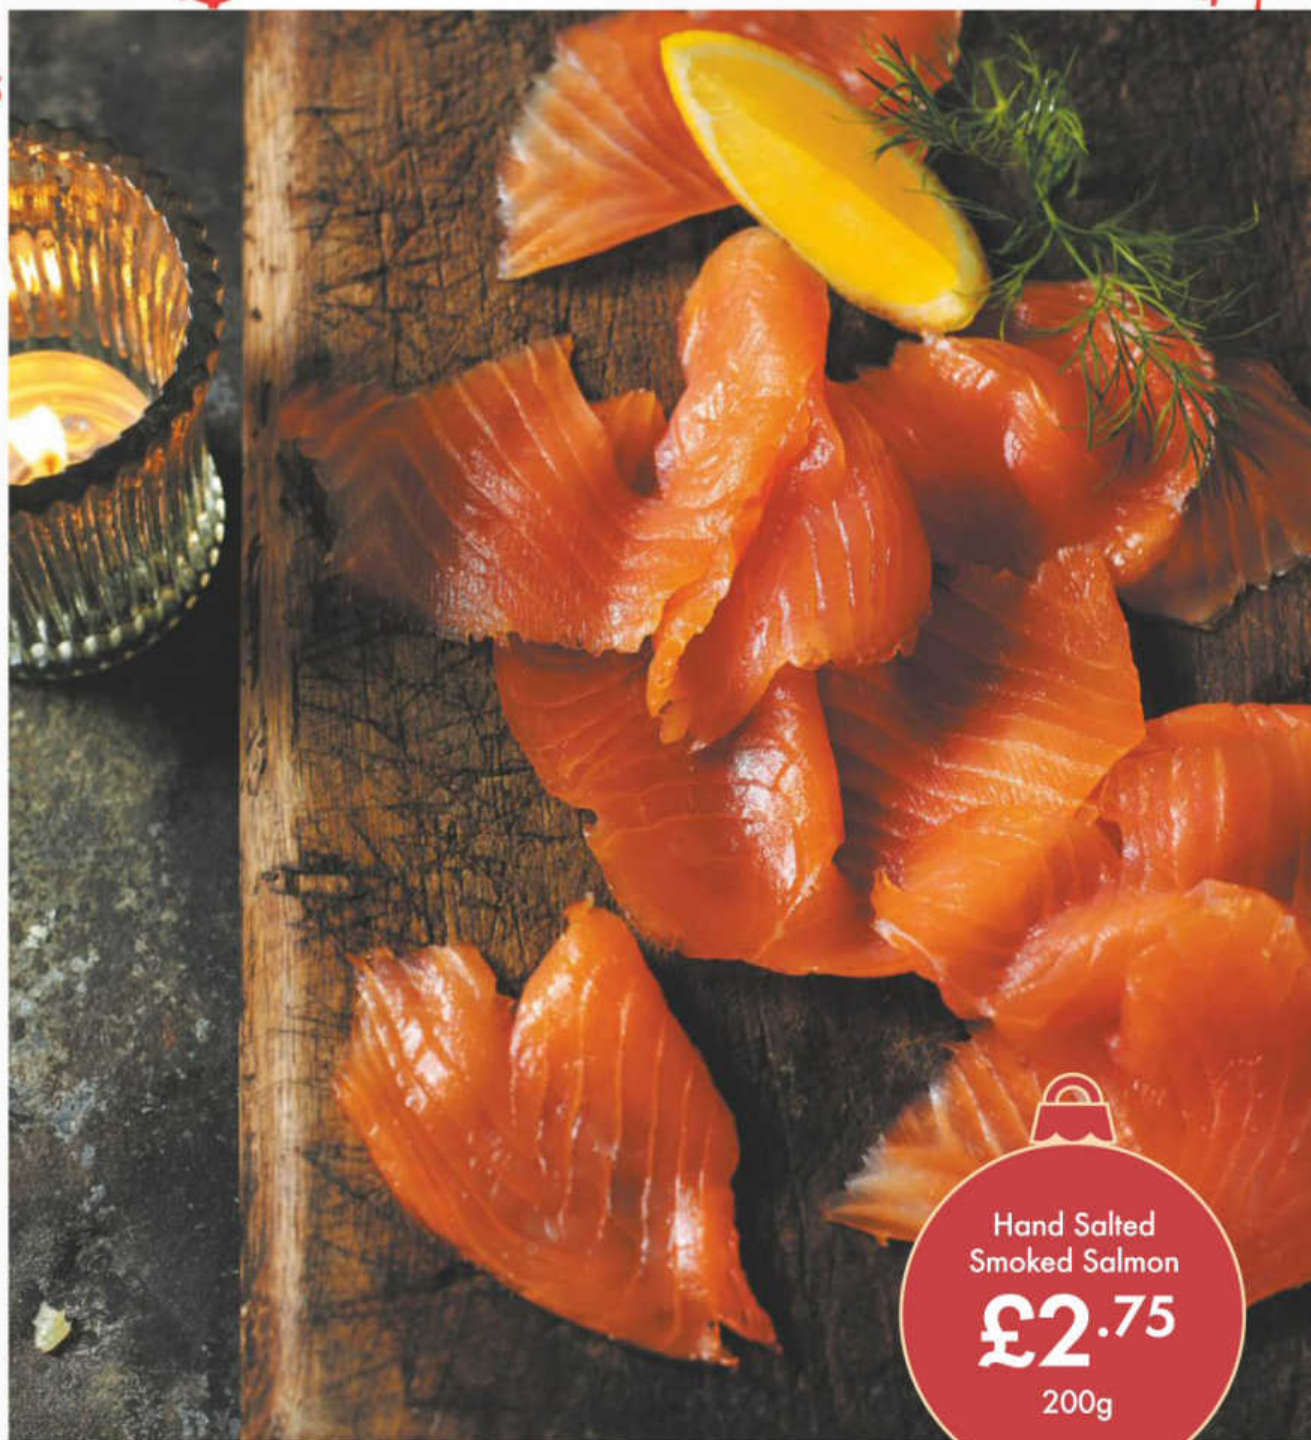

● Jealousy is a huge factor – even people in happy, open relationships can encounter it. It is a very good idea to make a plan for if one of you – including your guest – feels envious.

If You're Single

● Think through your fantasy the same way a couple would. Why do you want to have a threesome? If you have a couple in mind, is it because you have feelings for one or both of them? If you are turned down, how would that make you feel?

● Think about how you would react if one of them felt jealous, or if you felt jealous of their bond.

● Remember, threesomes can be awkward, boring and not hit the spot you want. The pressure to feel sexy, perform and enjoy can have a negative impact.

PARIS AFTERMATH

'People Won't Sit Next To Me Because I Wear A Headscarf'

New reports show there's been a spike in the number of Islamophobic attacks since the Paris shootings. Adviya Khan, 27, from London, tells us how she's been affected...

I've started to notice a change in the air – tiny instances that never happened before. On crowded tube trains, the seat next to me will remain empty and people are staring at me more in a way that makes me feel uncomfortable.

They're tiny, subtle things but they happen daily and they add up to something bigger, something scarier: the fear of being attacked because of my religion. And while I can't speak for all British Muslim women, I am guessing they feel it too – the tense, tight atmosphere that's occurred since the Paris terrorist attacks.

And it's not paranoia. Violence against Muslims has starkly risen in the UK in the past few months, including a woman wearing a hijab being pushed into the path of an oncoming tube train. Thankfully, she only had minor injuries but that doesn't make it any less terrifying. My friends and I now stand with our backs against the walls. When you're wearing a hijab – something that proudly shows off your religion – you can't help but feel scared.

And I don't want to feel afraid. It's ridiculous that I should have to. What these terrorists did has nothing to do with me, nothing to do with my family, nothing to do with my friends. I shouldn't have to explain that to people but sadly I do. It's a real shame as it's actually a brilliant time to be a British Muslim woman. I run a lifestyle blog with my sister, which we work on alongside our jobs. I work in local government and my sister is a barrister – Muslim women are so diverse, we're making waves in our careers and we're more confident than we've ever been. We're not used to feeling like victims.

We can't let small-minded people stop the UK being a tolerant place

We can't let the few close-minded people who judge us stop us from flourishing. I don't want us to feel we have to hide away – but then I don't want anyone to feel in danger. Which is why it's up to us as a society to stand up to those who discriminate, and people should continue to have the courage to defend others when they see someone being threatened. Unfortunately it's the negative incidences that get attention – people are kind to others all the time but it just takes one thing to completely ruin your day. I won't stop wearing my headscarf, it's ridiculous that a few small-minded people might stop the UK from being the accepting, tolerant place it has always been. We can't let them – I certainly won't.'

Every year when winter rolls in, my complexion gets oh-so dry, but this season I've managed to fight the flakiness, thanks to Filorga Hydra-Hyal Intensive Hydrating Plumping Concentrate, £45. No, it's not a super-heavy moisturiser or greasy balm – it's a gel-like formula that disappears into my skin like water, giving an intense injection of moisture in just one use. The secret to its superpowers? Hyaluronic acid, which rescues dry and bumpy patches, leaving my cheeks smooth, supple and plumped.

If you're a fan of the original, you'll love this updated version. The kick of coffee mixed with vanilla and patchouli makes it one of the sexiest scents around.

Spicy Orientals

Want to smell different to all of your friends? These warming scents will make you feel sexier than new undies.

With rich berry notes and spicy pink pepper, this cult classic can do no wrong – especially when its Christmas packaging looks as gorgeous as this! Jo Malone Pomegranate Noir, £89 for 100ml

Make heads turn with this seductive fragrance. A heady cocktail of jasmine, patchouli and musk, this is grown-up yet delicate at the same time. Narciso Rodriguez For Her L'Absolu EDP, £38 for 30ml

This is fresh enough to wear as your everyday scent – with orange flower and bergamot – but a pink pepper kick makes it quirkier than you'd expect. Plus, it smells so much more expensive than it actually is. Bronnley Wild Green EDT, £35 for 50ml

A feminine take on the label's original fragrance for men, with sensual rose, jasmine, violet and amber. Hello, date night scent. Angel Schlesser Oriental Edition II EDT, £42 for 50ml

scents of the season

Don't be alarmed, this is a fragrance, not a window cleaner! And once you smell it, the comparisons really do stop there. With mandarin and bergamot, it's eau so fresh! Moschino Fresh Couture EDT, £52 for 30ml

Fruity & Fresh

Have your senses blown away with these unexpected winter hits – sunny fragrances aren't just for the warmer months!

Punchy blood orange, passion fruit and plum are given a grown-up twist thanks to the added rose, jasmine and amber. The perfect pressie for Mum this Christmas! Elizabeth Arden Always Red EDT, £27 for 30ml

The myth that fresh scents don't last as long as others has been busted. This apple, basil and amber number stays on the skin for hours without having to reapply. Karsen Unicorn Tears EDP, £67 for 50ml

A totally addictive scent. We love the freshness of the bergamot, pear and lemon. Escentric Molecules The Beautiful Mind Series Volume 2 Precision & Grace, £95 for 100ml

Floral Fancies

Girlie girls love a floral, there's no doubt about it. But they don't always have to be delicate – these concoctions give the category a reboot.

Base notes of papyrus and amber give this rose scent a cooler edge. Byredo Rose Of No Man's Land EDP, £88 for 50ml

Orange blossom and Bulgarian rose make for one seductively sweet scent. Bag the travel spray that comes in this gift set for handbag top-ups. Flower By Kenzo L'Elixir EDP Gift Set, £59.20

Three of our fave florals – rose, gardenia and sweet pea – are joined by fruity raspberry and passion fruit. Juicy Couture I Am Juicy EDP, £49 for 50ml

This slightly oriental floral – with notes of musk and hinoki wood – is not as powdery as you'd expect. Shiseido Ever Bloom EDP, £40 for 30ml

A hint of leather gives this musky rose scent some depth. Plus, the chic bottle will glam up any dressing table. Valentino Donna EDP, £49 for 30ml

Good Enough To Eat

These sweet cocktail mixes are seriously addictive, and one spritz will linger on your skin pretty much all day.

With its coconut, nectarine and driftwood notes, one sniff will take you straight to a tropical beach with a piña colada in your hand. Nicki Minaj The Pinkprint EDP, £23 for 30ml

One bottle of the original Fantasy perfume is sold every 22 seconds in the UK. Time to get your hands on the limited-edition offering, we say! Britney Spears Fantasy Intimate Edition EDP, £18 for 50ml

This seriously sweet caramel scent is offset with fruity mango for a totally lip-lickingly delicious treat. Victoria's Secret Dark Angel, £35.38 for 50ml

As sweet yet fruity scent packed with peach, jasmine and caramel notes. We love the limited-edition diamanté bow tie, too. Viktor & Rolf Bonbon EDP, £66.60 for 50ml

Party girls will love this. Sweet honeysuckle, addictive caramel and berry notes smell gorgeous on the skin. Juicy Couture Viva La Juicy EDP, £36 for 30ml

Woody Wonders

Don't want to follow the crowd? These earthy scents are cooler than anything we've sniffed before.

The perfect winter scent – it's leathery with underlining sandalwood, making it linger on the skin. Plus, the 'smashed' glass bottle looks seriously luxe on your dressing table.

Diptyque Benjoin Bohème EDP, £130 for 100ml

This perfume has us reminiscing about long country walks. The rollercoaster of notes – cedarwood, vetiver, musk and pink pepper – is perfect if you love fragrances that are woody yet still fresh. Penhaligon's Blasted Heath EDP, £90 for 50ml

If you think woody scents can be too manly, this lighter alternative will tick your boxes. It's got vetiver, vanilla and sandalwood, and was the only scent that everyone at Look approved of.

Tory Burch Absolu EDP, £91 for 100ml

We don't know how they do it, but this smells exactly as the name suggests. It's just like reading a big book in front of the fire on Christmas Day. Yep, it's that spot-on! The Library Of Fragrance Paperback EDT, £15 for 30ml

This is Marc Jacobs' most grown-up perfume yet and we feel a bit like Adriana Lima (who features in the ad) when we wear it. Vetiver lingers on the skin, while rose keeps it girlie.

1 Burberry Limited Edition Gold Glow

Look's Sam: This pretty palette is fragranced with Burberry's signature scent. Simply dust it across your face for a dewy finish that'll leave you smelling sweet and looking luminous all night.

Despi: Burberry's translucent powder appeared duller than the others, but after sweeping it over my cheekbones and along my brow bone, it lit up my skin with a soft, iridescent shimmer. It's expensive, though.

2 Nude By Nature Sheer Light Pressed Illuminator

Look's Sam: This all-natural product is a gorgeous rose-gold shade and also doubles up as a blusher. After brushing it across the apples of my cheeks, I was left with a healthy, flushed glow.

Despi: This worked so well on my cheeks, but it was a tad too pink to put on all over my face. However, the velvety texture glided on and I looked radiant!

3 Laura Geller Baked Gelato Illuminator

Look's Sam: It might look like a swirled mousse, but this clever hybrid formula feels like a cream yet leaves a powder finish. The peachy pigment left me looking fabulously flushed.

Despi: Move over Kylie, this little palette made my skin luminous! The light-catching pigments in the product left me shining inside and out, and my new-found sheen lasted all day long – double win.

4 No7 Shimmering Glow Palette

Look's Sam: Good for sensitive skin, this sparkly palette has a subtle golden glimmer to it. Use in layers to build up colour and apply to the inner corners of your eyes to make them pop.

Despi: I loved how expensive this looks. It was sparkly, though, and left residual glitter on my cheeks.

5 MAC In Extra Dimension Skinfinish in Shaft Of Gold

Look's Sam: Coppery tones make this better suited to darker skin, but it gave me a warm glow.

Despi: This product is more of an illuminating bronzer than a highlighter and it was a bit dark for me. But the iridescent finish brightened my complexion well.

Get Shimmer Smart

- If you're really short on time, give your complexion a radiance boost by mixing a liquid highlighter in with your foundation.
- Apply the highlighter to your Cupid's bow and the inner corners of your eyes to make them appear brighter and your lips bigger.
- Paler skins should steer clear of darker bronze and peachy shades, and go for pearly, oyster tones instead.

How To Fake 8 Hours' Sleep

Cheat that 'I woke up like this' complexion – even when you've overdone it on the prosecco the night before...

'Do you think anyone will notice if I wear this eye mask all the time?'

1 Drink A Glass Of Pear Juice

Avoiding a skin-wrecking hangover is all in the prep, and drinking a 220ml glass of pear juice right before you start drinking could be a major preventative. 'An Australian survey recently revealed it could improve concentration and reduce your sensitivity to sound and light, while the fruit enzymes contribute to the breakdown of alcohol in the body,' says nutritionist Frida Harju of Lifesum.com. Party on!

2 Faux Your Glow

There's nothing like a bit of colour to make you feel alive. Time to fake it: 'Cleanse your skin and apply Xen-Tan Fresh Face Tan before you drop off,' says Look's Beauty Editor, Sam Freedman. 'You'll wake up with a bright and energised glow.'

3 Get Minty Fresh

That early-morning shower can pack more of a punch if you use a peppermint shower gel. Research suggests peppermint stimulates the senses, and peps up a tired face. We love Burt's Bees Fabulously Fresh Peppermint & Rosemary Body Wash.

4 Skip The Olive Oil

Craving a fry-up? We're not judging! Just make sure you cook with pumpkin seed oil instead. 'It contains vitamins A and E, which speed up your skin's healing process,' says Frida. Puffy eyes, be gone!

5 Make Over Those Eye Bags

Believe it or not, red lipstick can help to neutralise dark circles beneath your eyes. Apply the lipstick with a brush under your eyes, pop your concealer on top and blend with a foundation brush,' says Sam. Ta-da!

6 Be A Bright Spark

Have to go into the office the day after your party? Wear your brightest outfit. A new survey has revealed that wearing bold colours not only lifts your mood, but it's also the ultimate distraction from tired skin. Think primary shades and you're onto a winner!

7 Treat Skin To An Overnight Facial

'To get the most out of your sleep, spend your 40 winks (or less) reinvigorating your skin with an overnight mask, such as Superdrug's B. Radiant Overnight Mask,' suggests Sam. 'The next day, you'll wake up with rehydrated, smoother-looking skin.'

8 Try The Ten-Second Splash

When you're feeling particularly tired, splash cold water over your face for an instant refresh. The cool temperature shocks the blood vessels in your face, tightening the skin, and will leave you looking more awake. Easy!

'Wait, did someone say spin the bottle?'

Why We ♥ Sisters!

TWO CLASS-ACT COMEDIENNES, TOO MUCH KIDULT FUN AND AN EPIC HOUSE PARTY – THIS IS ONE SISTERHOOD WE WANT IN ON...

Our fave funny women are back. Yep, real-life BFFs and long-time collaborators – Tina Fey and Amy Poehler – are making the magic happen on the big screen. This is one cinema date you definitely don't want to miss.

'Honey, we got vodka, party games and more Pringles than you can shake a stick at'

It's the ultimate #TBT – but in realtime...

Yep, the sisters team up to throw a party in their childhood home one last time before their parents sell up. Cue 80s tracks, teen diaries and poster-filled walls.

Oh, the LOLs...

Amy Poehler plays the straight-laced sis to Tina Fey's party-mad counterpart. Best sister act, like, ever.

It's the new-age Mean Girls...

Because some high-school rivalries never die. Bridesmaids actress Maya Rudolph is brilliant as the frenemy uninvited to the party. Ouch.

The best cameo...

Loved WWE star John Cena in Trainwreck? Now he's taking on the role of a tattooed drug dealer who's all about the small talk. Our new, not-so-secret screen crush.

Family matters...

Move over, Step Brothers, this is the new must-see for siblings. You'll spot every fight, every heartfelt moment, and get ready for some tough love, serious bedroom banter and sweet dance moves...

Sisters is in cinemas from 12 December

CHANEL'S PARISIAN DREAMWORLD IN ROME

For the latest Chanel Métiers d'Art show, Kaiser Karl recreated Paris in Rome. Taking over the Cinecittà film studios – where Liz Taylor filmed Cleopatra – models strutted down a street complete with Metro station, boulangerie and roadside bistro tables. Bella Hadid made her Chanel debut, looking fierce in a leather skirt and lace tights. Monsieur Lagerfeld wows again.

First glitter roots, then glitter beards, now glitter pits. Yep, sparkly armpit hair is the new trend storming Instagram, but it's more than just an out-there beauty movement. Part of a feminist campaign, ladies are snapping their #glitterpits to encourage others to free the armpit, achieve 'equality in the under-arms region,' and 'show that your furry pits are beautiful.'
